

Computational aspects for the nonlinearity of Boolean functions

Max Sala

Department of Mathematics, University of Trento, Italy

We will review some known methods to compute the nonlinearity of Boolean functions, starting from the classical approach via the Walsh transform and arriving at describing several approaches based on multivariate polynomial techniques, including Groebner basis computations.